Some factors for you and your partner to consider:

- Are you married? Do you plan to be?
- Do you co-own property?
- Do you have children?
- Do you want to leave a legacy?
- Do you want to provide for others in your life, in addition to your partner?
- Do you want to preclude strife in settling an estate after one of you passes?
- Do you have an existing estate plan that doesn't allow you to take advantage of post-DOMA benefits?
- Do either (or both) of you want the other to manage affairs and make healthcare decisions in the event of permanent disability?

Everyone, regardless of relationship status and where they reside, should have an estate plan.

We are equipped to handle, and know the nuances of, same-sex estate planning in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

If you and your partner want to provide for each other and/or have questions about planning for your future together, contact an experienced BSR&B attorney today.
